Protection For Educational Facilities

We Understand The Challenges...

Constant State of Change. Educational facilities are always in a state of physical transformation; new buildings being constructed while older structures undergo remodeling and retrofitting. The type of occupancy changes from building to building; from a multi-story dormitory to a research laboratory to a sports arena.

Different Systems and Codes. In most cases, an educational facility - whether a few buildings or a sprawling campus - offers fire and security systems of different types, ages and manufacturers. In addition, the codes and standards which come into play range from building and electrical requirements to accessibility for the disabled mandates.

The Need for Integration. The fire and security challenge is one of integration. People must be protected, property must be safeguarded and both access and egress must be provided. All of this must be accomplished in a cost-effective manner that meets the intent of the law and also provides for growth and inevitable change.
