Protection For Hospitality Complexes

We Understand The Challenges...

Diverse Fire and Security Requirements. Hospitality complexes are actually small cities. During the day, large groups of people gather in banquet and meeting rooms where occupancy levels change from hour to hour. At night, guests in rooms on multiple levels must be protected, alerted and provided safe egress in an emergency. In addition, food preparation activities present a 24-hour fire hazard to be addressed.

Matched Solutions. Given the variety of fire protection and security challenges present, it is imperative to design and install the right system for each unique situation. For example, hood and duct fire protection systems for cooking areas, security systems for guest rooms and smoke control, fire detection and fire sprinkler systems for the entire complex.

Integrated Protection. Whether the project involves new construction or retrofit, the fire protection and security solutions should be part of an integrated master plan for the complex. The proper implementation of this plan, from system design and specification through installation and acceptance testing, will result in a safer total environment for guests and employees.
